Principles and Guidelines for Global Government Affairs

Foreword

Volkswagen is one of the world's leading automobile manufacturers and the largest in Europe. With 12 brands from seven countries, annual deliveries of over 10 million vehicles, more than 100 production facilities in 27 countries and nearly 600,000 employees, the Volkswagen Group's sphere of action is global.

Volkswagen stands for respect, tolerance and open-mindedness and takes responsibility for employment, prosperity, society and the environment in many regions worldwide. It is our mission to create enduring value for customers, employees, shareholders, neighbours and partners, and to contribute to sustainable development around the world.

Volkswagen operates in a complex and highly-regulated environment. The Global Government Affairs department acts as a mediator between the company and politics, i.e. parliaments, governments and authorities as well as political parties, associations and non-governmental organisations. The objective of Global Government Affairs is to establish and maintain the company's scope of action and to keep decision-makers in politics and society informed.

This document defines the principles and guidelines for the Global Government Affairs department.

Role and responsibilities

The Global Government Affairs department introduces the company's positions, its knowledge and experience into the legislative and administrative decision-making process by providing comprehensive information and reliable and competent advice. Our reputation is founded on credibility and professionalism. The Global Government Affairs department also contributes its own suggestions and stimuli for a sustainable policy as regards industry, transport, the environment and society as well as offering advice regarding the development and focus of government innovation strategies.

In dialogue with stakeholders, Global Government Affairs contributes to raising the company's profile as a socially responsible player and improving its reputation. The aim is to maintain stable and balanced relations with all stakeholders.

Within the company, Global Government Affairs fosters a culture of open dialogue and the dismantling of barriers to communication with both politics and non-governmental organisations. It examines and collects information, analyses its relevance and drafts differentiated strategies for the company.

Global Government Affairs networks

In addition to the Global Government Affairs department of the Volkswagen Group, the brands and regions also maintain corresponding departments. The internal network further includes representations and offices in several capital cities worldwide.

The external network covers numerous memberships, delegations and commitments in industrial and trade associations, sustainability initiatives and other organisations active at national, European and international level. Collaborations with non-governmental organisations such as the German Nature And Biodiversity Conservation Union and the German Red Cross complement the network of Global Government Affairs.

Approach to transparency expectations

Global Government Affairs acts according to the principles of openness, transparency and responsibility. The department's structure and key memberships are therefore published on the Group website.

The Group Representation Brussels provides details regarding its structures, resources and objectives in the transparency register of the European Union.

Contact with parties, office holders and elected officials

Neutrality in contacts with political parties and interest groups is a matter of course for Global Government Affairs. As a general rule, we are open to dialogue with representatives of all political parties. However, we do not host any events with a public profile which involve politicians at our sites during the three months immediately preceding an election.

All contacts with office holders and elected officials strictly comply with the law as well as with internal regulations aimed at avoiding conflicts of interest and corruption.

Events

Global Government Affairs engages in political dialogue in many ways, including the organisation of information events. The purpose of these events is to provide information about the company's strategy, to argue for political positions and to discuss conceptual solutions to social challenges.

Regardless of the type of event, the activities organised by Global Government Affairs (hospitality, brochures, giveaways) are always appropriate and comply with the relevant legal principles and company guidelines and policies.

The exchange on topics of a technical and business character is central to these events.

Further information on the event formats is published on the Group website.

Political sponsoring and donations

Modern democracy relies on a functioning party system. The existence of parties with deep roots in society is also in the interests of industry and companies.

Volkswagen therefore supports parties across the democratic spectrum in Germany, for example. By doing so, the company is acting in accordance with the principles of political party financing as set out in the Basic Law of the Federal Republic of Germany. These principles require the parties to generate their own revenues in addition to the reimbursement of election costs by the state.

In principle, the Global Government Affairs department is willing to support democratic parties with the organisation of political conventions and similar events and to place advertisements in party-affiliated publications as a platform for forming the political will in an appropriate and well-balanced way.

The department combines this support with the intention to raise public awareness for the company and its projects.

As a matter of principle, it ensures an appropriate balance between its own services and the contractually agreed consideration.

All sponsoring activities comply with the Volkswagen Group's Code of Conduct and the company's guidelines on corruption prevention.

To ensure transparency and verifiability, figures relating to support for political party events and to the advertising budget for party-affiliated publications are published on the Group website.

As a general rule, donations to political parties, party-related institutions or politicians are not made.

Code of Conduct

Compliance with international conventions and the laws and regulations of the countries in which Volkswagen operates is a matter of course for all employees of the Global Government Affairs department. This is equally true for compliance with company regulations, our Code of Conduct and corruption prevention measures.

Volkswagen stands for respect, tolerance and open-mindedness. Global Government Affairs employees therefore solely use honest and legal means to fulfil their duties.
